FEATHERS IN THE WIND

August 11th might seem like just an ordinary day for most people, but for the Hoehnle household it holds a special significance.

I probably should say that it is Charlemagne's brother's birthday and thus would mean Hoehnle Oma would make a special cake along with gathering a bouquet of flowers as she did for all the birthdays.

I could also mention that Hoehnle Opa and family would recall that on this day in 1923 he (Jacob) had gone to the Amana general store to buy the bike this oldest son would use DECADES later to court his future daughter-in-law, me.

The real interest, however, was August 11th marks the anniversary of the 1923 woolen mill fire. All three of the Hoehnle men at one time in their lives worked there.

Two years from now will mark the 100th anniversary of the fire.

Lots of people have written articles about it such as it beginning by a dust explosion in the flour mill across the mill race. The flour mill was never rebuilt.

Fred Schmieder was one of the first to discover the fire and went for help which makes me wonder if this was an "explosion" why no one had heard it especially since the hotel and at least one kitchen house was near by.

Nearly a dozen buildings were destroyed. The alarm (bell) was sounded and could be heard all the way to Middle.

People came from all the villages to help. Men used a pump wagon to try and hose down the fire, but the heat and exhaustion caused many to collapse.

One woman helping to save items from the weaving building threw a box out a window that hit a man on the head. Later on ironically, they would marry. (Elsie and Carl Ackermann)

The fire departments from Marengo Oxford came to help and were eventually given woolen buckets in gratitude.

Iowa City had just bought a brand new fire truck which you could still see on display in the lower part of City Park decades later. The fire department took off to aide the Amana people. Mayor Emma Harvat rode along.

Unfortunately, when they returned home the city reprimanded them for leaving the city "defenseless" against fire!

Cedar Rapids on the other hand, took forever to send help. Finally, an engine was loaded onto the train, but it never arrived because by that time the destruction was over.

The mill race was pumped dry and the man working the steam engine stayed on as long as possible keeping the huge engine running in order to power the pumps until the ceiling over his head was on fire.

Obviously, God did provide because, according to the records the woolen mill began to partially operate a month later thanks to the determination of the colony and their faith.

Less than a decade later Amana changed from a communal way of life to a corporation. Was it because of the fire or because of lots of other things influencing the change such as higher education, desire for more worldly goods, cars, radio, people from the "outside," a loss of faith, or perhaps the Great Depression and prohibition exacerbated the situation prompting a call for change. Maybe all of the above.

B.S.H.

Do you recognize any of these men? They were the "Amana Sangerbund". Five names are George Schmieder, Henry Klipfel, Adam Clemens, Paul and John Leichsenring, but who is who? Plus three more. Tell RC. 622-3908. With RC Eichacker's assistance, the Heritage Museum goal is to identify people and settings in old photographs.
